Great Secrets in Cultivation.

Those of our readers whose recollections extend back far enough, may remember to have heard of a great discovery that was once made in the cultivation of the earth, and for the public announcement of which, a few hundred thousands were asked from one of our state governments. The state government declined paying the price, but the people individually paid subsequently large sums in the Without giving any opinion as to the and Allentown. merits of this discovery, we shall undertake, for the benefit of our readers, to mention several other secrets in the art of cultivation, doubtless quite as new and original, and which we are confident, if properly known, appreciated, and acted Choice and Millord. Returning, leaves Port upon, would be worth to the mass of A- Jervis immediately after the arrival of the merican farmers, quite as much as the morning train of cars to New York, at about sum claimed for the other.

1. The first, and perhaps the most imin its season-and never putting off till to-morrow what can be done to-day. We have known farmers, occupying not over a hundred acres, who lost by sowing crops too late, by failing to seize the most favorable opportunities for planting and for harvesting, by allowing grain to iods, and in various other ways, to lose remedy for this evil would be worth in will patronize them. the aggregate, to a half a million of our farmers, no less than fifty million dollars | August 19, 1852. annually. What government will give us half this amount for divulging the secret! How many individual farmers will give us a dollar for this knowledge?

2. Another great secrect is the proper saving of numeres. Half our farmers at least, waste more than half the value of the manures deposited by their domestic animals, through the escape of all the liquid portions, worth one half of the whole; and by the dissipation and loss of a large share of the solid portions. These losses might be saved by the construction of tanks or basins for liquids, and by the tree use of straw, dried muck, sawdust, tence-corner turf and soil, &c. for absorbrug and retaining the portions of manure would again be fifty million dollars.

From the Boston Bee. The editor said, Dec. 22nd-Dr Hoofland's celebrated German Bitters for the cure of Liver complaint, jaundice, dyspepsia, chronic or nervous debility, is deservedly one of the most popular medicines of the day. These Bitters have been used by thousands, and a friend at our elbow says he has himself received an effectual and permanent cure of Liver complaint from the use of this remedy. We are convinced that, in the use of these Bitters, the patient constantly gains strength and vigor -- a fact worthy of great consideration. They are pleasant in taste and smell and can be used by persons with the most delicate stomachs with safety, under any circumstances. We are speaking from experience, and to the afflicted we advise their use.
